"Faces in Nature"

Photographs of Charles Stern

Continues thru April 27th - Woods Gallery

Charles Stern has an eye for seeing beyond the surface. For example, he doesn't just see tree bark, but rather is inspired by it to create a face within the photograph, giving nature both a personality and mystery. The viewer will see some faces immediately, while others are more subtle.

While touring the exhibit you can fill out a ticket for a chance to win a free photograph. The drawing will be held at the end of the exhibit in April and the winner will be notified.
